POETRY.

What the Young Man Saw in Broadway.

I stood on the steps of the Astor, And gazed at the living tide Of vehicles down the middle,
And people up either side.

And I saw a maid who was "pumpkins," In a shawl of rust and ochre, Jump down from the step of a carriage, While her robe "got caught" in the rear.

Oh! the robe was of moiré antique, (A very expensive "rag;") But a skirt peeped out beneath, And that was a coffee-bag.

I knew it once held coffee, Though now 'twas another thing;
For on it was "FINE OLD JAVA," Y-marked in store-blackening.

And I thought, as she gained the sidewalk,
And the "muslin" again was furled, How much those out-skirts and in-skirts Were like men's hearts in the world;

How many a Pharisee humbug Plays a life-long game of brag;
His words all silk and velvet,
And his heart but a coffee-bag!

And I turned me into the Astor, For my heart was beginning to sob,
And I told the tale to my brother,
And it rung him in for a drink.

It rang him in, for cocktails,
And then to myself I confessed, When I thought how I came by the "ardent,"
That I was as bad as the rest.

LITERATURE.

MY PASSENGER;

Or Adventure with the Bourbon Pirates.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

Concluded from last week.

Early one morning land was reported upon the harbor bow. I knew it to be the Bourbon Island. The wind was very light, the ship not making more than three knots with her royals and studding sails. About the middle of the forenoon we saw a long rakish-built boat or rather vessel—coming out from one of the coves of the island. I leveled my glass upon the craft, and found it to be full of men.
There were seventy-five at least.

"Captain what is she?" asked Savage approaching.

"I think there is not much danger in setting her down as a pirate," I replied. "I have heard that there were a nest of pirates on the Bourbon Island, and I think we are likely to find it true."

"Pirates?" uttered Savage, turning pale;
"They will be likely to be ugly customers, won't they?"

"Of course they will. They certainly outnumber us three to one, and are in all probability all of them stout, reckless fellows."

"But you don't think that they will follow the rule of putting all their prisoners to death, do you?"

"You can judge of that as well as I can," was the reply. I made; and then I turned to my men.

I could see that Savage was much frightened, and in fact, nearly all were startled by the appearance of the suspicious boat. The presence of a pirate is not a pleasant theme for any one, and more especially those land pirates.
For they generally make it a practice to put their prisoners to death, so that their haunts may not be discovered.

We had no carriage gun but there were cutlasses and pistols enough on board for the crew, and I lost no time in arming my men.
All told were mustered 41 men. The ship's crew, including myself, made twenty-nine, and there were twelve of the passengers, though I knew not whether to count upon Walter Legrand or not. However, he could fire a pistol and that was something. By the time I had made these arrangements the quica was within two cables' length of us, and we could see that there were nearly eighty men on board of her—not so great odds as we had first supposed, but still two to one against us. We could see too that they were all of them powerful looking fellows, and of all shades and complexions, some of them white, some red, some brown and some black.

I arranged my men close to the bulwark with what muskets we could muster, and then turning to see if Legrand was upon deck. He stood by the cabin companion way with a sword in his hand, and with two superbly mounted pistols stuck in his belt. The sword I had not seen before and of course I judged that it must have been his own. It was broad and heavy, of the most exquisite polish, and mounted in a hilt of gold and precious stone.
I was for the moment chained to a scene. The youth looked most strangely. His face was yet pale and calm, but its expression was change; the fire of his eyes was deep and intense, and the usual sedate, melancholy expression had given place to exultant smile of satisfaction. I did not speak to him. I saw that he stood over the place where his mother had found refuge.

By this time the quica was nearly alongside.
I waited until the moment for pistol shooting came, and then I gave orders to fire. There was a long, wild yell from the boat, and on the next moment she struck our rigging. Our shot had not done much execution nearly all the quica leaped for the ship. We beat them back as well as we could but they began to gain upon us, and at length my men gave way.
I urged them all I could but the bloody pirates came on in such wild fury that to stay there seemed impossible.

Savage fell back to the poop, and his companions followed him. The pirates struck down three of my men, and the rest fell back to the opposite side of the deck. "By a basty count I made out there were about twenty of the enemy, and we had about thirty-eight left,

For a few moments there was a dark mutual suspension of hostilities. The pirates then had all gained the deck—all that were alive, and their chieftain stepped out in front of them.
He was a Spanish, but spoke English well.

"Do you surrender your ship?" he asked.
"Of course we surrender," spoke Savage, seeing that I hesitated. We may receive quarter if we surrender quietly."

"Never!" spoke a calm, clear voice, and on turning we beheld Walter Legrand,— "Never!" he repeated, while his dark eye flashed proudly. "Are we Englishmen?"

I saw that these words produced a wonderful effect upon my crew, and so they did upon the other passengers, and I must confess that they went to my heart with a nerve power.
Only Captain Savage seemed to dislike them.
Upon him they seemed to grate harshly.

At this moment Mrs. Legrand came upon deck. She heard her son's voice, and perhaps she thought he was in danger.

"Santa Maria!" exclaimed one who seemed to be second in command among the pirates, as soon as he saw the beautiful woman.

"No, no, by San Paul she's mine!" cried the chieftain, and as he spoke he started toward the spot where the widowed mother stood, his Lieutenant him and so did several of the others.

"Stand back!" said Walter.
"Out by!—or die!"

Thus spoke the pirate leader, but he spoke no more for the young man's sword swept the air like lightning, and the villain's head was clef in twain. Another stroke, and the Lieutenant shared the same fate.

"Now men of England, show the blood of your proud nation!"

Every man heard those words for they were like bugle notes—clear and ringing and distinct. I remember how Legrand looked at that moment. He had just forced his mother below when he spoke and then turned upon the crew. His head was up, his teeth set, his finely chiselled nostrils distended, and his eye literary emitting sparks of fire. He dashed like a lightning shaft among the foe, and we all followed him. Ever and anon I could distinguish his form amid the smoke—for there were many pistols fired—and I could see the flash of his bright blade where it was covered with blood. I fought with all my might, and so did all my men. Savage fought too, but he did not seek places of danger, rather seeing to keep his back against the bulwarks.

Ever and anon the flash of Walter's sword caught my eye, and I failed not to see a man fall when it descended. My own men looked to him as their leading spirit, and I did not feel offended. I rather felt proud of him.— How could I help it? The very genius of Mars seemed to sit within him. It was almost a miracle how he swept away the foul villains from before him. I saw his arm move and I saw another pirate fall.

Then a cry broke upon our ears, it was a cry for quarter, for mercy. The fighting ceased and the living pirates huddled together in the starboard gangway and disarmed. They numbered eleven men! My next work was to count my own, and I found eighteen of them and nine of the infantry officers.
In the centre of the deck stood Walter Legrand. He was leaning upon his sword and a tiny stream of blood trickled down his faithful blade and made a dark pool upon the deck about its point.

He was calm and serene, but the old look of sad melancholy had once more taken possession of his countenance.

"Captain favor," said he addressing me,
"can you take care of the prisoners?"

I quickly answered yes.

"Then," said he "I will go and comfort my mother. She may be anxious."

The prisoners were put in irons, and placed in safe confinement and then we sat to work and cleared up the deck. All hands turned workmen, and ere long the dead were sewed up in old sails and buried in the deep blue sea, friend and foe together. There were but few wounded men. Such as there were however were properly cared for.

That evening when we sat down to supper no one could have told, from the appearance of Walter Legrand, that anything unusual had happened. He met us with that same calm smile of recognition, and his face bore that same look of unobtrusive, modest reserve.
The meal was eaten mostly in silence. I could see that the other officers gazed upon the youth with looks of admiring wonder, and even Captain Savage was humbled and awed.

Legrand saw the look that was cast about him and he knew what they meant. After he had finished his supper he wiped his lips and we knew from his movements, that he was going to speak. A pin might have been heard to drop at the moment.

"Gentlemen," said he, while a slight trem-ulousness was visible in his nether lip,— "You all know what has passed since I came on board this ship, and I shall not recount the painful tale. I heard the word coward and have not resented it, and had not this day's events come to pass, I should not have made the explanation which I am now about to make for it might have been received as the hollow excuse of one who dared not fight. You have some of you heard of my father. He was a brave man and a good officer, but in an evil hour he had a difficulty with a brother officer, and he accepted a challenge to fight a duel. He fell. He had marched boldly to the cannon's mouth for his beloved country, and his life was spared that his best friend might take it—My mother heard the sad story—she knew my hot blood and she feared for me. She drew my head upon her grief-laden bosom and asked me to promise her that I never would give or receive a challenge to a mortal combat, and I would never lend by countenance or assistance to the same in the capacity of a friend. I made the promise, and sealed it with a vow, and a mother's prayer went up that I might be true to it. Gentlemen you know all now."

There was a tear twinkling in his eye, but he turned quickly away and went on deck.
For some moments after he had gone, there was a death-like stillness.

"Gentlemen," uttered Savage startling quickly from his seat, "follow me on deck."

He started for the ladder and we all went after him. Legrand stood by the quarter railing and Savage moved quickly to him.

"Mr. Legrand," said the humble officer, in a trembling, but frank tone, "I have wronged you most deeply, and here before all the living witnesses of my error I ask your pardon.
Forgive me sir and I will never do such wrong again."

Walter took the proffered hand, and while tears trembled on his dark lashes he replied: "Captain Savage, most joyfully do I accede to your request. Let the past be forgotten, sir, and may its darkness be more than obliterated by the friendship of this hour."

The temptation could not be resisted;—My first mate, a noble hearted sailor, threw up his cap and called out for three cheers. And they were given—three times three—for the noble youth who had not only been the means of saving our ship and crew, but who also had had the moral courage to do his whole duty, although the ajeer and of scold of companions against him.

The widowed mother had followed her son on deck, and she heard all that transpired, and never shall I forget the strange look that dwelt upon her countenance as she clasped her hands and raised her streaming eyes towards heaven. It was a look of such joyous pride and ardent gratitude as words cannot tell.

In due time we arrived at Calcutta without future trouble, and from that evening of reconciliation I heard not a profane word nor ribald jest fall from Captain Savage's lips. He was a better and happier man. Walter Legrand was urged most strongly to join the army, but his love for his mother detained him.
He settled his father's business, and he and his mother returned to England with me.— Three years after that he was sent to Parliament from his native borough, and no man can enjoy more extensively the confidence and esteem of his fellows than does he; but I know that all the honors which men can heap upon him never take that place in his heart and love which is filled by the gratitude and trusting confidence of his own dear mother.

MATRIMONIAL ITEMS.—They were just married, Mr. and Mrs. Lovett, a charming young couple, in the rural village of Orange.
Mrs. Lovett, as all young married women, imagined she loved her new husband more than all the world besides. Perhaps she did; but they went to house-keeping right away, and her father had fitted her out with such a nice supply of all manner of needful furniture and fixings that she set her heart on them, and they fairly rivalled her other half, and divided her affections with him. Particularly that China tea-set! It was the neatest and newest pattern—a perfect love of a tea-set; and what should John Lovett, her own husband, do within three weeks after they went to house-keeping, but take a beautiful pitcher out of that set and go out of the door with it to the pump to get a drink of cold water.
He had been confined to the house for three days with an ugly boil upon his knee, and as he stepped out upon the stone-flagging his foot slipped, and down he came, breaking his boil and screaming with pain. His fond wife heard the fall and the groan and rushing to the door, cried out,

"My dear have you broke that China pitcher?"

"No, hang the pitcher, but I will;" and suing the action to the word, he dashed it into a thousand pieces on the stones.

Sometimes such women need to be cured by a little discipline like that administered in the old country by sandy McNair when he came home from a hard day's work, through a drenching rain and wet to his skin. He was ready to sink down with fatigue when he entered his dirty cabin, where his thrifless wife was sitting over the peatfire toasting her toes.

"Now Sandy," said the wife, "go down to the spring and get me two pails of water, for you are as wet as you can be, and you can't get any wetter."

Sandy was hurt, and at first he meditated rebellion and refusal; but a better thought occurred, and taking the pails he set off in the rain, and tired as he was, he soon returned with them full. Instead of setting them down he came up behind his lazy spouse, and pouring one of them and then the other over her head and shoulders, he said to her,— "There, Mrs. Mac, you are just as wet as you can be, go and get the water yourself, you can't get any wetter."

As a singing master was on his way to fulfil an engagement in a town in the Connecticut valley, a few days ago, he unfortunately happened to sneeze while passing a bridge over a deep ditch, throwing his false teeth from his mouth into water from ten to fifteen feet deep. The result was that the engagement had to be postponed, for the master could not sing with an empty mouth.

President Pierce and family it is said are to visit the St. Catherine's Mineral Springs in July, and Mr. Stevenson has been notified to have a suite of rooms ready. Queen Victoria and the whole Royal Family will be here too in the course of time.—Mail.

A party of Indians passed through the village of Brighton, C. W., a few days ago with a white child in their possession which they stated had been given to them, but they refused to give any account of it. They should have been detained until they gave a satisfactory account of how they became in possession of it.

AFFAIRS IN THE CRIMEA.

REINFORCEMENTS OF THE ALLIES—POPULARITY OF THE FRENCH COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.
General Pelissier's appointment is immensely popular, and operations on a great scale are confidently hoped for. It is surmised that Pelissier will make an attempt to cut off Lipyrdis's army.

It is said that Omar Pacha has offered to take and hold Simperopol with his Turks, if the French will support his advance. The secret exhibition which was recalled from Kiersh, is reported to have sailed; destination unknown.

The recent arrival of three French Divisions under Generals Aurel, Hesseillon, and Angely, make the allied force in the Crimea about 200,000—namely: 120,000 French; 50,000 British 40,000 Turkish; 11,000 Sardinian.

All the troops from the camp of Meslen have been shipped to the Crimea.

THE SEIGE OF SEBASTOPOL.

Many improvements have been made at Bakalava harbor. Hired labor is abundant.

May 11—Another Russian attack was made to-night. The night was very dark, and the fight lasted half an hour.

May 12—During a severe storm of rain and the darkness of night the Russians made another sortie against the left attack chamber clear up to the British trenches, and some of them leaping over the parapets they were bayoneted. They fought most desperately. The rain having damaged their amunition they attacked with rockets. Their loss was severe. The British lost a captain and over a hundred killed and wounded.

May 19—Gortschakoff telegraphs:—"The enemy's fire is weak. Our losses are moderate. Both sides are erecting batteries. The battles before the walls are severe."

May 21—General Pelissier telegraphs as follows:—"A very lively combat against our important position has lasted all night. We obtained a complete success. The enemy's loss was enormous and ours considerable."

The Paris Patrie gives further particulars stating that the French attacked the Russian entrenched camp, near the Quarantine bastion on the night of the 22nd, and again on the 23rd, when they carried it by assault. The battle was begun by the Russians.

GREAT BRITAIN.

IMPORTANT DEBATE IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS—THE MINISTRY SUSTAIN-ED BY ONE HUNDRED MAJORITY.

An exciting debate took place in Parliament on the evening of the 24th. Disraeli brought forward a motion of want of confidence —expressing that Parliament cannot adjourn for a recess without expressing its dissatisfaction at the ambiguous language and uncertain conduct of the government in reference to the question of peace or war, and that under these circumstances the House feels it a duty to declare that it will continue to give every support to the Queen in the prosecution of the war until, in conjunction with her allies, she shall obtain a safe and honorable peace.

Sir Francis Baring, on behalf of the Government, offered as an amendment, that the House, having seen with regret the failure of the Vienna Conference, it will continue to give every support to continue the war until an honorable peace be obtained.

Sir Wm. Heathcote moved to alter the amendment by inserting the words "and still cherish a desire that the communications in progress may arrive at the successful issue."

Mr. Gladstone approved of the amendment of Sir Wm. Heathcote.

Disraeli and his supporters fashed the government—especially Lords Palmerston and Russell.

Lord John Russell replied, defending his conduct at Vienna, when the debate was adjourned.

The debate was resumed on Friday evening, when the House divided, the vote being 219 in favor of Disraeli's motion, and 319 against it—a majority of 100 for the government.

Earl Gray made a similar motion in the House of Lords, but withdrew it.

The bill for abolishing newspaper stamps was read the second time in the House of Lords.

The Bishop of Oxford has moved for the papers concerning the Canadian Bishops and Church.

Both Houses have adjourned until June 11th.

On the 24th Lord Palmerston held a private meeting of the members of Parliament at his house. Over two hundred were present. Lord Palmerston asserted the intention of his government and declared his intention of prosecuting the war. Other members also spoke, and on the whole the proceedings were harmonious.

It is expected by the 20th of June that every available man in Great Britain belonging to the infantry regiment will have embarked for the war.

Some changes have been made in the war department by placing the Ordnance Office in the hands of the Minister of War.

FRANCE.

The appointment of General Pelissier to commander-in-chief was well received in France.

The Paris papers were all badly hoaxed by copying a sham war despatch from the London Standard.

Queen Victoria visits Paris on the 16th of August.

RUSSIA.

Russia had just annexed four districts of country belonging to the Mongol on the frontier of China.

ITALY.

The King of Sardinia's infant son died on the 19th. It is reported that the King will go to the war in the East. The Corcoran Suppression bill is vetoed by the Senate.

Ministerial Difficulties.

There is a regular stampede in the wigwam. A cabinet council was held on Sunday! Last to settle or smooth over ministerial disagreements, rather than to transact public business. It has leaked out that Mr.
Joseph C.uchon's conduct has become offensive to his colleagues, especially it is said to Messrs. Cartier and Lemieux, that they are determined even to sacrifice office rather than submit to his insufferable ignorance.— Wholly ignorant of his duties, he bolles those who understand them. Though perfectly incompetent to comprehend the numerous difficulties connected with Upper Canada property disputes, he will listen to no advice, and spurns all interference. And with the rudeness of a boor, he contradicts the Governor General, at times, and thinks he has a prescriptive right to brow beat all the rest of the government. The Lower Canada section of the ministry have at last determined that this bullying and rudeness must come to an end, or they will force Mr.
Cauchon out of their company. It is unfortunately, the Attorney General West, also, Mr.
Inspector General Cayley, took sides with the Commissioner of Crown Lands in the dispute between him and Mr. Cartier, and that Sir Allan McNab and all the rest of the ministry opposed them. We may mention, that the immediate cause of the present difficulties was the attempted arbitrary dismissal by Mr. Cauchon of some officers in the Crown Lands Department. We will not at present enter into the particulars of this attempt, nor discuss their merits. When the proper time arrives we shall be fully prepared to touch upon a subject with the history of which we have had good cause to be acquainted. It was rather amusing to witness the beavilled behaviour of the members of the ministry in the House yesterday forenoon. The Provincial Secretary looked and acted as if he had been engaged in eating ten-penny nails for the twenty-four hours previous; and Mr. Cauchon's expression resembled that of a pig driven past a corner he was determined to turn. In the afternoon these discomfited bed-fellows were most unenviably conspicuous, or rather invisibly conspicuous; for when the House re-opened there was not one of the inside cabinet present! Mr. Solicitor General Smith alone was in his seat—and even he left in a hurry, obedient to the summons from Sir Allan McNab. An Act to amend the Lower Canada School Acts was passed to a second reading in the absence of the entire ministry. Had they been present it must have been kicked out in deference to the honorable bigoted, pigote member for Montmorency. By and bye they came strolling in, one after another. Sir Allan McNab looked like a very persnickish crabbed

THE NEW ERA.

Newmarket, Friday, June 16th, 1855.
THE TOWNSHIP COUNCIL OF WHITEHURCH at its meeting, appropriated £30 towards the purchase of a new site for the school.

We direct attention to the sale of Mr. McCORMICK's, advertised elsewhere to-day. This chance affords a good opportunity to persons desiring of investing capital in landed property.

Among our new advertisements of to-day will be found that of Dr. CHANTLER & CO. This firm have lately bought out Mr. J. E. Smith, in Toronto, and are now doing business in his old name, Knight, Esq.

We direct special attention to the advertisement of Mr. D. SUTHERLAND, in reference to the arrival of his New York Goods. His stock is highly spoken of by all who visit his establishment. We are extremely obliged for the usual compliments.

Aurora, O. W.
Aurora, June 5, 1855.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE, BY AUCTION.
As the subscriber has received numerous applications since the above property has been advertised, he has determined to give it a chance by putting it up for public competition; it will therefore be sold by public Auction, on SATURDAY, JUNE 30, 1855, At Mrs. Stead's Inn, Lloydstown,
At the hour of 2 p.m. Terms made known the day of sale. This indisputable.

To Stock Breeders.
For Sale, a fine Blood Bull Calf, FOUR weeks old, sired by Capt. Benzoni's celebrated Short Horned Bull.
S. TORREY.
Newmarket, June 8th, 1855.

NOTICE.
THE subscriber begs to intimate the arrival of this regular supply, in addition to Stock, of reasonable FANCY AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS, Suitable for all purposes of body wear and householding. To give a list would occupy too much space in a newspaper.
The subscriber trusts that all intending purchasers will have their wants supplied from this Stock, and find their views met as to extent, variety and price.

NO SECOND PRICE.
WILLIAM H. DOW.
Corner of King and Yonge Streets,

FARMERS!
IN view of the low prices being offered for WOOL, the Lessee of the Newmarket Factory has made extensive preparations to manufacture for customers by the yard, besides doing the custom CARDING AND CLOTH-DRESSING.
Farmers wishing to save the expense and trouble of hand spinning and

HAND WEAVING.
Will find it their interest to bring their Wool to the NEWMARKET FACTORY,
And either exchange it for cloth or have it manufactured for them into such goods as they may wish. Flannels for petticoats. Flannels for sheets. For making good cloth this Factory beats: When cold wintry winds come howling around. These large woollen blankets will keep you cozy and warm.
But if you want money and prefer imported trash then bring on the Wool and I'll pay the CASH.
W. A. CLARK
Agent.
Newmarket, June 2nd, 1855.

CAUTION.
THE public are hereby cautioned against trusting any person on my account, without a written order, as we will not pay any such debts contracted.

AMUSEMENT

A Showman, exhibiting a picture, said: "Ladies and gentlemen, there is Daniel, in the den of lions. These are the lions, and that is Daniel, whom you will easily distinguish from the lions, by his having a blue cotton umbrella under his arm."

At a judicial investigation at Balaklava, a witness, a sailor, was asked what his religion was. His reply was: "I'm blown by it."

"Are you a Catholic?" asked the examiner. "Oh no," was the response, "I'm quite sure I'm not that, for I hate the Pope like blazes, and I delight in steaks on Friday."

[Roars of laughter.] The judges declared him to be a Protestant.

A Smart Boy.—"Well, sunny, whose pigs are those?" "Old sow's air."

"Whose sow is it?" "Old man's air."

"Well, then, who is your old man?" "If you'll mind the pigs, I'll run home and ask the old woman."

"Never mind, sunny, I want a smart boy, what can you do?"

"Oh I can do more than considerable, I can milk the geese, ride the turkeys to water, haunting the grass hoppers, light fires for the flies to court by, cut the buttons off dad's coat when he is at prayers, keep tally for dad and mummy when they scold at a mark—old women is always ahead."

"Got any brothers?"

"Lots of 'em—all named Bill, except Bob, his name's Sam—my name's Larry, but they call me Lazy Lawrence for shortness."

"Well your most too smart for me."

"Travel on, old stick-in-the-mud, I shan't hire you for a loss to-day."

ANOTHER THREE RIVERS. CATHEDRAL. B.L.—Another development of Romanism in Lower Canada was exhibited in the House of Assembly on the 15th. A measure has been introduced by Mr. John. to amend the Act concerning the erection of parishes and the building and repairing of churches. The act is one which, like the "Three Rivers Cathedral Bill" of last session, gives power to the priests to levy from the people such sums as they think they will require for their church building operations. This new measure of Mr. John went a little further, and took away from the people the right of appealing from the assessment thus made to the Circuit Court, a privilege which they had enjoyed before. This was pointed out in the course of the debate by Mr. Forrester, and the whole system of given power to the priests to tax the people was assailed by Mr. Brown, Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Hartman, but the measure rose in its defence. Mr. Lorranger said the people ought not to have the right to appeal, because it might be abused. Mr. Casault said an appeal would cost more than the assessment, and Dr. Fortier contended that Protestants had no right to interfere in such a matter. The minority, of course, went with the church, and the bill was passed by a large majority. Our reporter says it was amusing to see the rapid disappearance of Upper Canada members just as the division was coming on. Not one Upper Canadian Reformer was found voting for the bill, but there were very few who voted against it, the ranks of the opposition being thinned by absence. Even the Upper Canadian Conservatives who voted yes were not numerous. They were Bowes, Cayley, MacNab, McCann, Robinson, Shaw, Solicitor General Smith, SPENCE, and Stevenson. We put down Spence among the Conservatives; it is a perfect farce treating him any longer as a Reformer of any degree. On the occasion, the priest party were joined by the Rouges, those gentlemen who are accused of being revolutionists, and who yet appear afraid of taking even the mildest steps to check the power of the priest. Mr. Dorian of Drummond, the boldest and most enlightened of his party, and Mr. Poulin alone voted with the nays. When is all this to end? How long are we to be priest-ridden?—Globe.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We learn that a melancholy accident, resulting in death, happened to one of the employees on the great Western Railway, on Wednesday night last. The Engineer of the Express Train going East, when within a short distance of Ingersoll, saw a man lying on the track, and when he arrived at the Station he communicated the fact to the Conductor, when both of them went back to the spot and found the body of a man shockingly mutilated—the train having passed over the body. His name was Murdoch McCran, a Scotchman. A bottle of liquor was found lying near him, and the accident was, on doubt the result of intemperance.—Banner.

MATT WARD.—It is stated that Matt Ward, who murdered Butler, in Kentucky, is the great lion of the New Orleans streets. He is a fine specimen of a horse, beautifully caparisoned, and a carriage with two colored gentlemen, in blue suits, white gloves, and black hats, with green bands and a small feather on the upper edge.

MORE OF IT.—Speaking of the present scarcity in Lower Canada, the Quebec Chronicle says, "agriculture is neglected or in the hands chiefly of peaceful, unambitious, unenterprising people who are satisfied with procuring a mere livelihood, who exhaust the soil without attempting a single improvement, or making a single exertion to sustain the efforts of nature. Now, these people, we have every reason to suppose, are crammed with theology; though few of them can neither read nor write. And so they crawl listlessly from the cradle to the grave."

NEW PATENT Washing Machine.

THE Subscribers are now manufacturing a new and improved

PATENT WASHING MACHINE

Which, for service and durability, defies every other invention—one trial being sufficient to satisfy the most skeptical. This Machine is warranted to wash with fifty per cent less wear upon the clothes and in two-thirds less time, than any Machine now in use. It will not break or tear off buttons, and is capable of cleansing articles from the finest fabrics to the coarsest webs. These Machines can be seen at the Shop of the subscribers.

JOSIAH JAMES & CO.

A Patent for the above Machine has been secured. The public, therefore, are cautioned against infringing. J. J. & Co.

Newmarket, Jan. 24, 1855.

We, the undersigned, having tried the above Washing Machine, can confidently recommend them to the Public. The process is simple; at the same time, the work is performed speedily and satisfactorily—making no difference whether the article is small or large.

"Equitable" Fire Insurance Company OF LONDON.

CAPITAL, £500,000 STERLING.

General Agent, British North American Colonies FREDERICK R. STARR.

MONTREAL.

This Office insures against Loss or Damage by Fire, all descriptions of Buildings, including Mills and Manufactories, and the Goods, Wares and Merchandise in the same; Ships in Harbour or in dock; Craft on Navigable Rivers and Canals, and the Goods laden in the same; and Farming Stock of all descriptions.

The "Equitable" Fire Office will, by constant analysis of its own experience from time to time, adopt such rates of Premiums as the nature of the risk may justify.

With this view, an annual investigation will be made into each class of risk, and a return of one moiety—of fifty per cent—of the net excess will be made to all classes of Insurers, whose Policies have been in force for three years.

The engagements of the "Equitable" are guaranteed by a responsible proprietor, and an ample subscribed Capital. The insured are free from the liabilities of a Mutual Insurance Society, and entitled, according to the plan of the Company, to a return of half the profits.

Losses are made good without deduction or discount, and are adjusted and paid in Montreal, without reference to London.

R. H. SMITH, Agent.
